

Press Release:

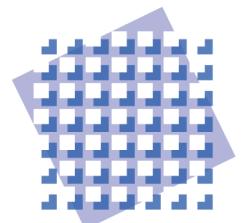

CHAS & CAESER Success for the Professional Quality Leaders

SPS consistently providing the very best in Empty Property Services to the UK Public and Private Sectors

March 2009: Renowned throughout the UK Social Housing Sector as the 'Professional Quality Leaders', SPS have been successfully reassessed for the Contractor Health and Safety Assessment Scheme (CHAS), having achieved the highest grade in its industry last year, and the Corporate Assessment for Environmental, Social and Economic Responsibility (CAESER).

CHAS is the scheme endorsed by the Local Government Association and Trades Union Congress and supported by the Institute of Occupational Safety and Health (IOSH) and Department of Trade and Industry (DTI), which is available for use by public and private sector organizations when short listing contractors.

Accredited companies are those that can demonstrate an acceptable standard of health and safety compliance. During the tendering process purchasers can save additional vetting time during contractor selection by stipulating conditions for participation, one being successful accreditation to CHAS or Construction Line.

The criterion is very demanding and the benefits of successful accreditation vast, which is why many organisations apply to the scheme annually.

Year on year the bar continues to rise along with best practice and service quality. SPS continue to lead the industry in raising service standards and health and safety compliance.

CAESER (Corporate Assessment for Environmental, Economic and Social Responsibility) has been developed as an inclusive program for supplier engagement, designed for the public sector and large private sector organisations who wish to formalise and adopt sustainability principles into core business functions, including supply chain management.

Under the new scheme, SPS has been recognised as “an organisation with an excellent understanding of the relevance of sustainability and Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) to its business operations”.

Shirley Duffus, Director of SPS, commented: “Achieving both accreditations, with such high results, illustrates the commitment our organisation has to developing the best service for our customers and their end users, and providing quality products and services that are not only safe for our customers, but seek to eliminate any detrimental affects on the global environment. We believe safety and sustainability is the key focus for future generations, and SPS is dedicated to leading our industry forward in achieving these goals”.
